Scouts

Dear Editor:

On May 8, 1976 the annual Scout-O-Rama was held at the Monterey Fairgrounds with many Explorer, Boy Scout and Cub Scout units from the Peninsula participating.

On behalf of our Troop Committee, leaders and Scouts, I would like to express our sincere appreciation to the Peninsula residents and businesses who helped us by purchasing the 1443 tickets sold by our troop. Top salesman for the troop was Van Crego with 585 tickets followed by Carl Still with 220 and Pete Woodward with 150.

The exhibits and displays by all of the participating units showed great ingenuity and considerable work and the leaders of the units should be congratulated. Larry Mc-

Wherter, a student at the Defense Language Institute, who headed up the Scout-O-Rama Committee deserves a special word of praise for a job well done. The music provided by the 7th Infantry Division Band of Fort Ord was an important addition to the opening ceremony.

Although our troop won the National President's Award for the second year in a row under the able leadership of Scoutmaster A.W. Gamber, we are all looking forward to the challenge of next year.

I personally hope that more Peninsula residents will take time out from their busy schedules next year to come to our Scout-O-Rama and see what the Scouts are doing.

Bad news

Dear Editor:

Some of the best reporting of some of the worst news I've read in a long time occurred in the May 13 issue of your paper. The excellent recording of unwelcome news covered passage by county planning commission of an "amendment" to the Carmel Valley master plan — apparently requested by and passed to please Carl Hooper and his boss George Bestor Associates — to permit four times the density the master plan had envisioned on Val Verde Drive — resented and fought against by every other participant at the hearing; a threatened property tax rise of up to 100 percent in the Carmel area; approval of tentative map by county supervisors of the Arroyo Carmel second increment, adding 44 more units to five and one-half acres of land at the mouth of the valley — another project heatedly opposed by many speakers at many hearings, based mainly on the unanswered problems of water supply and sewage disposal. How these responsible commissioners and supervisors could have voted as they did in the face of the overwhelming arguments against such decisions leaves me baffled, as does the legal opinion on the propriety of Dr. Marcucci's voting on controversial matters when he was sitting as a lame duck, and when his office had officially expired last January. (The tax assessor's story is of course something that he personally is not accountable or responsible for.)

About the only good thing in that paper-in the political news department—was Margot Hugh's letter on page 2, describing a well thought-out, painstakingly researched solution to Carmel's traffic and parking problems. One cannot but marvel that so sensible and farsighted a proposal complishing both goals of relieving traffic congestion and the unsightliness of parked cars over all the streets in the village should have been, to date, ignored by the Carmel City Council, after two lengthy meetings on the subject of mini-buses, to which they now appear committed. Everyone who has visited Community Hospital is impressed with the quietness and comfort and ubiquity of the mini-trolleys there. They would surely be the cheapest means, as well as the most comfortable, of moving the tourists, as well as our own residents, including the elderly and-or handicapped.

Rinky Dink

Dear Editor:

I am a former resident of Carmel and long-standing subscriber to the Pine Cone. Your issue of May 13 'Letters to the Editor' called to my attention of the proposed destruction of the "Rinky Dink" as protested by writers and readers of the town weekly.

I make infrequent trips to Carmel for sales reasons and I always make a point to have lunch at the "Rinky Dink" during the week. I was surprised to find this esteemed establishment closed on my recent visit. Now that I understand its future is shortlived, I must express my disapproval of the city's intention. The "Rinky Dink" has served as a meeting place for Carmelites for years and years and I have found that meeting old high school buddies and college acquaintances over coffee and 'quips' by the Kelseys is a never ending pleasure.

I would hope that I may again find a "Cheese Dink, Rare" awaiting me on my next visit. Customers of Monterey Savings and Loan may eat elsewhere—the space available at the "Rinky Dink" is limited (and usually reserved)!

ART WILKERSON San Francisco

One of my originals of old Carmel-by-the-Sea would be Lewis Slevin, a quiet gentleman with a mild Irish way of greeting you in his place of business on Ocean Avenue,

Once upon a time.

by Frank Lloyd

south side just east of Lincoln Street.

Impressive were the large models of full-rigged ships in his store windows. They made for childhood dreams of the oceans upon which ancestors sailed, whether as an American Naval officer before the Civil War, or as small sea traders in their own vessels out of Aberystwyth in North Wales. Slevin's store was also a place for investigating the wonders of kaleidoscopes, and a source of stationery and such.

Most unusual was the outside bank of mail boxes built into the wall just north of the main entrance, where the then small number of residents could receive their letters

But more than all this, Slevin was a photographer and some of his pictures of early Carmel remain, predating the period of Lewis Josselyn — odd the two shared that first name! These two also shared most of the early pictorial history of Carmel, seen frequently in pictures supplied from Pat Hathaway's collections.

Tall and dark, Slevin — he was lame — would swing himself around on a cane. He would answer a question from a customer in a serious manner, peering down through his spectacles as if sizing up a situation.

He had a sweet and lovely wife, who seemed to bear with great patience the problem of a young daughter who had suffered from some malady.

They also were blessed with a handsome son younger than the daughter. As a small boy slightly older than he, I counted him as a friend.

Then one day I realized I had lost probably the first friend of nearly my own age that L ever had, for the boy died suddenly of some childhood affliction.

With great seriousness we walked to the Slevin house in the north end of town and up the front steps to leave a note on the door. There we found the black wreath of finality.

The Slevins are gone, but somehow there remains a lingering feeling for a family united in suffering, a family close knit and yet friendly to everyone who came their way.

And whenever I see a full-rigged ship model, such as is now to be found on the Fish Wharf in Monterey, I cannot help think of the Slevin ships and that perhaps Lewis Slevin, had he not been born with what may have been a clubfoot (like the poet Byron), might have sailed in such ships instead of being a proprietor of a small-town business.

Perhaps those ships were the expression of his secret and thwarted ambitions.

Another delight in the Slevin store, which was almost forgotten, were the figurines, some of Chinese gentlemen, some of dancers in flared out skirts.

Some long-ago artist in seaweeds cleverly fashioned small people from bits of kelp floats, usually rich brown as such pieces of kelp are when properly dried, or yellowish-white when the larger floats were cut open for the skirts.

Black eyes were sketched in, as were ears and noses, and the remains of a kelp leaf sometimes topped the face. Bits of stems made the legs and these in turn were set into bases likewise made of large kelp floats.

The figurines, the kaleidoscopes, the fullrigged ships, and the magic mailboxes of the United States Post Office provided enough wonder to make the Slevins memorable.

5th District race

Farr, Fonda present different perspectives

Sam Farr also views the race for supervisor as one in which the voters have a definite choice, but he would like to see more emphasis on county issues, rather than state issues, that the Board of Supervisors can not act on legally.

For instance, he sees the Coastal Plan and Proposition 15 as vital issues to Californians but he says they are 'emotional ones. Personally, he favors the Coastal Plan and sees it as an opportunity for local citizens to participate in land use decisions affecting the coast.

Farr prefers to work with issues that are closer to home. He cites the Big Sur Pilot Study as an excellent example of citizen planning. The study's goal is to devise a master plan for the Big Sur area which would comply with the standards set by the coastal commissioners. The study group has been meeting each Monday night and has recently completed a series of town hall meetings collecting citizen opinions.

Farr, who was instrumental in obtaining the funds for the study, says this is an example of a tax-payer's group bringing their collective knowledge to the problems. He points out that through this method, the people are the government. And to him, there could be no better way to have representation than this.

Farr would like to see people have a better understanding of local government and how it works. With this knowledge and understanding, he thinks that people would learn what the tools of local government are and how best to use them. Farr finds that a good way to learn this is through the citizen committee.

At present, Farr has asked for a public hearing to try to establish a committee to work on the growth situation in Monterey county. He hopes to see this committee determine the carrying capacity of the area. Subjects such as how long we should have growth in the area, the complex water situation and road use and capacity should be answered by this committee. Ideally a formula for growth can be established that would be consistent with our financial and physical means, said Farr.

Farr defines the role of supervisor as three-fold. These are administrative, overseeing the county budget; legislative, through writing of county ordinances and quasi-judicial by making decisions involving land use and zoning permits.

Having a good knowledge of these three elements is crucial to being a good supervisor, according to

Farr. He feels he earned these qualifications when he worked in Sacramento. There in addition to working for the State's legislative analyst, A. Alan Post, Farr worked for five years as the chief consultant to the State Legislature's Constitutional Amendments Committee.

"There I learned the framework of California government," says Farr who noted that he was responsible for initiating and adopting numerous constitutional reforms.

And he hopes to bring some of this reform spirit to county government. Farr points out his revision of the tax assessment system in the county. Under this system, he says it will be doubtful if the county will ever go for seven years without a major assessment, as is the situation now. Data will be collected and computerized.

A regular physical reappraisal will be made by the assessor to correct errors. In addition, the assessment notice has been redesigned into a letter format. With the elimination of legal terms, the form will be easier to interpret and understand, says Farr.

After a great deal of study and investigation, Farr found the county assessment practices in agreement with state laws. "But this doesn't solve our problem, which is a heavy reliance on property taxes," said Farr, pointing out that 272 units of government rely on these taxes. He hopes to see the county move away from this heavy reliance and feels it can be done through programed

New priorities need to be provided for county services in Farr's opinion. He would like to see more emphasis on building people, rather than building buildings. This could be done by putting more money into social services. He gave examples of such organizations as Meals on Wheels, Volunteers in Action, and Friends Outside, as some he would like to see receive more support.

Farr hopes to see a revision of the county health delivery systems and has proposed a county-wide health plan. He is not against investigating dividing the county along economic lines. At present he has initiated a program to restudy the Carmel Valley Master Plan. He is in the process of establishing an advisory committee, and he hopes to model the plan after the Big Sur Study Plan.

But if Farr has one main belief, it is his belief that the county government be accountable to its constituents. He thinks that it is wrong for government to assume it knows what is best for the people. Though government should provide leadership and direction, it must be responsive to the consensus of public decision, says Farr. This can be done through hearing and forums, which will give the people a working understanding of their government.

"If people know what is possible from local government, they won't be misled by flowery statements and promises that cannot be filled at the local level," said Farr.

People input would move board out bureauocratic management, according to Farr. "With better understanding, people can define policies, see where the money is coming from and how it is spent," said Farr. This is what he hopes to achieve as supervisor. He said, "With people input, we can take government back to the people. We can say here are our tools and here are our limits, what would you like us to do?"

If voters want a clear cut choice, they'll have it in the 5th Supervisorial race, according to candidate Willard Fonda.

"We're different in every way," he said as he listed his and opponenet Sam Farr's differences in age, background, philosophies and political affiliation.

Their stand on the issues are 180 degrees apart. But more than that, they differ on what these issues actually are.

People are asking about the Coastal Plan, Proposition 15 and local government representation said Fonda. He said these are the questions that the people feel are the issues.

And he feels that people should have an answer to these questions. Fonda feels that each candidate's stand on the issues of the Coastal Plan and Proposition 15 is a key to the type of programs he would support as a supervisor.

He sees the Coastal Plan as an invasion of privacy, and a giving away of rights. Rights, according to Fonda, that we would never get back, once they are given away. Fonda said, "It's only at the local level of government that a system of local representation works." And, he favors keeping the land use decisions in the control of local people, rather than centralizing them Sacramento. He says this local decision process would be given away if the Coastal Plan were to go into effect.

"People want their property rights protected," said Fonda, pointing out a recent example he had seen of this in Big Sur Pilot Study meetings. He said that the Big Sur area could be described as a liberal area. "But when it comes to property rights, they are conservative," said Fonda.

Fonda doubts the whole pilot study. He feels it's wasted money. He points out that not only does the Coastal plan not exist yet; but if coastal commissioners do not feel the plan provides the degree of environmental protection set by them, they will not accept it.

Though he feels Proposition 15 is difficult to understand, Fonda says no new agency need be created oversee nuclear development. He admits there have been some problems in this development but feels that they have been taken care of. "This is my opinion," he said, "people will have to make their own decision."

With his background of administration and management, Fonda feels he will be able to improve the efficiency of county government, thereby reducing funds spent in running the county.

"My management plan is a simple one, as any good plan is," Fonda said. He suggests that the board meet an additional day each week. This meeting would not be for the review of new business but for an examination of direction and efficiency of each county department.

"This would put the department heads before the public," said Fonda who feels the plan would increase departmental efficiency to some extent just because of this accountability. He pointed out that it would also help the supervisors see departments that aren't needed or could be combined with other departments.

"I don't want to see the Board of Supervisors kept at arm's length. It should be involved in management decisions," said Fonda who believes there should be more of a business approach to operating the county.

He also favors an intelligent appraisal of the area. Fonda feels that this would not automatically mean higher taxes. If the tax money is sufficient now, says

Fonda, a reduction in the tax rate may be in order. He does think that taxes will increase; but he feels that it should and could be a reasonable increase.

Fonda sees no growth and uncontrolled growth as forms of death. He would like to see the growth in the area compliment what exists, not destroy it. He does admit this is easy to say and hard to do.

"I believe in citizen committees but I don't believe in an over dedicated ecology approach," Fonda said, pointing out that an extreme view gives rise to extreme views at the other end of the spectrum. He does feel that concerned citizens should work on county planning and land use.

If elected he plans to have a steering committee which would meet informally, perhaps monthly. These citizens would represent all the various areas of the 5th District. By discussing the various issues, area by area, Fonda feels this group, or steering committee, would give him a better picture of what the people he represents want.

Until he's made a complete study of the Carmel Valley Master Plan, Fonda has no exact opinion on it. His general feeling is that the residential planning is well done but that the commercial planning is premature. He added that it does distress him that the plan will have to conform to standards set forth by the Coastal Commission.

Fonda would like to see a good county health care plan, more return on tax dollars, perhaps in the way of better county services in hospital care, and he would like to see more local advertising for county jobs. He said the county almost invariably hires from other county governments and that this is causing county government to be ingrown. "It seems we're (Monterey County) more interested in hiring those that know the ropes of county government than those that have the qualifications," Fonda said.

Though Fonda sees no easy solution to the water situation, he feels the county must accept the fact that it's going to cost more for water in order for more water to be brought here. How the water will be brought will be a difficult thing to work out, he says.

Fonda is proud of Monterey County as it is and can see no purpose in dividing it along economic lines. He sees no reason why the beauty in the recreational areas and the outstanding agricultural areas cannot compliment each other.

Generally, Fonda views the government as the final step of citizens working together.

One such person is the working drifter - or a more apt name and a way that he likes to think of himself the human cougar.

Author Lloyd Morain in his book "The Human Cougar" describes this individual, tracing his development and place in American history mostly through interviews and personal accounts from the cougars themselves.

laborer, and unionization, plus the fact that there no longer is an expanding economy, have had a tremendous effect on the life of the Cougar.

The Cougar is unwilling to accept the rules of organization of the union. To him it means a loss of freedom and individuality. But it also is a loss of job stability and benefits.

To the Cougar, the present is all. To spend time in thoughts of the future is unrealistic to him. His satisfaction comes from new challenges. Possessions have little meaning.

The Cougar is not a member of conventional society. He doesn't need a working with winos who work long enough to buy a bottle and living under less than desirable conditions sometimes takes its toll on the Cougar. In a more reflective mood, Cougar Kenneth Hunt said, "Many of the days in the field I had prayed silently for a diffferent life. I prayed this was a bad dream and that when I woke up I would find all the small comforts of home, under shady trees and all the wonderful things to go with it. But, day after day, I would punish myself solely to exist."

When the working conditions were too bad, it wouldn't be long before the Cougar was on his way to the next crop or ranch, or area where there was a lot of new construction work. Through these experiences, the Cougar meets people from every class - from tramps and bums to the wealthy rancher: And he feels at ease with each of them.

Unlike the tramp or bum, the Cougar does not beg, or accept handouts. When the old hotels were filled or when he was down on his luck, he would stay at the missions. But most Cougars felt the missions had their price even if they were free. Religion is a personal feeling to the Cougar who resented the mission's regimentation of it.

Morain points out that the average education of the Cougar is about seventh or eighth grade. He says, "Eric Hoffer, with his sixth-grade education, Bertrand Russell who never received a Ph.D., and the Cougar who left home and school in the ninth grade to explore the world

Morain writes, "The individual that could follow the harvest in the spring from Texas northward was in demand, and the hard worker enjoyed prestige. These working drifters were ever pushing on; they opened up Wyoming, Idaho, Oregon and all of the West."

Among the roamers and drifters, the Cougar is unique. He embodies the classic American virtues of self-reliance, practical intelligence and complaining courage blended with sensitivity and tenderness, according to Morain.

Most Cougars are on the road in their early teens. School is filled with too many rules for them and they are ready to get out and taste the real life. Dam mitigation measures

The high price of fish

Mitigation measures proposed by the Fish and Wildlife Service could add over $4 million dollars initial costs and over $125,000 annual maintenance costs to the price of a dam on the Carmel River.

The federal report to the Army Corps of Engineers favors a proposal which would deliver water from a new dam at the San Clemente site downstream to a pumping and distribution center near Highway 1, instead of the proposal which would draw water directly from the reservoir.

Because either project would destroy 90 per cent of existing steelhead spawning grounds, the report continues, a steelhead hatchery and related transport facilities costing an estimated $1.3 million should be built, with costs to be born by the project.

Annual maintenance costs for the hatchery are estimated at $75,000, exclusive of angler-use facilities. Capital costs of those facilities would be about $5,200 with annual maintenance costs of $1,300.

Under wildlife mitigation, the report calls for the purchase of 1,100 acres of privately owned lands within the exterior boundaries of the Los Padres National Forest at a costs of about $550,000.

Lands listed as suitable for such use are widely spread and include Piney Creek (560), the Caves (280), Avila Ranch (320), and Hopkins Ranch (220).

Development costs for the establishment of these wildlife management areas are estimated at $121,000, with annual maintenance costs of about $6,800.

The report also calls for acquisition and development of 100 acres of privately owned land between Carmel River miles 10 and 11, to be managed for wildlife by "an appropriate non-federal agency."

Estimated purchase, development and annual maintenance costs are $350,000, $5,000 and $1,500 respectively.

The report took advantage of the opportunity to request as enhancement a rainbow trout and warmwater fishery capable of producing 73,000 rainbow trout annually, at an estimated capital cost of $930,000.

Purchase of species for stocking is estimated to cost $500,000.

Other mitigation measures * and their estimated costs for the alternative recommended include:

--$15,000 annually for stream habitat management work between the dam and the mouth of the river.

--$13,000 annually over a 10 year period to study the effectiveness of the hatchery, reservoir releases and stream habitat management in offsetting project caused fish losses.

-Acquisition of a 100-foot wide environmental easement on undeveloped land on each side of the river from the dam to the river's mouth, no cost estimate as yet.

ENVIRONMENT IMPACTS

The mitigation measures are necessary, the report contends, because of extreme environmental impacts caused by the enlargement of the reservoir at San Clemente.

The report lists six major environmental effects:

-The dam would preclude access for 2,000 migratory steelhead trout to about 40 miles of spawning and nursery habitat.

-The enlargement would alter downstream conditions such as vegetation encroachment, sedimentation and blockage of the river mouth by a sand bar, Continued on page .7

Morain, as he appeals to what he feels is the "cougar strain" in people.

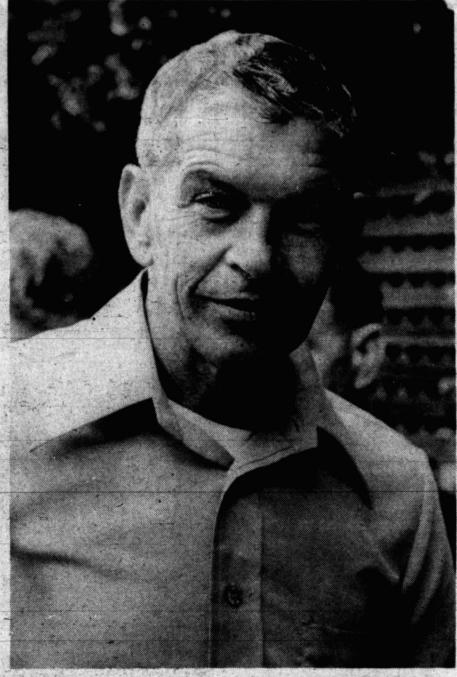

Morain feels he personally doesn't have that strain but he does feel it is very alive in society. And he hopes that this type of person will rally to the aid of the Cougar.

Machines and automation are part of our existence now. The ideals of the working drifter and his way of life may very well be lost; except for a few eccentric individuals who can disassociate themselves from society and its demands.

In the hopes of helping themselves some of the Cougars decided to organize. In a two-day meeting with Morain and his wife, these men drew up "Rules of the Cougars, Inc.". Morain points out that this meeting was a "get-together of the unorganizable trying to organize". Though rules were outlined and O. Lloyd Hicks was elected "Top Cougar" a name he now used daily, the Cougars have not met again since the 1968 meeting.

Some of the older Cougars seem to be settling down now. Tom McAnally is working as an independent woodcutter just outside of Salinas; Hicks has a small almond ranch just outside of Modesto; and Kenneth Hunt is writing in between ranch jobs. But they still lust for adventure and know that there are many Cougars out in the world. One of the things older Cougars hope to do is to make it easier for younger Cougars to exist. They seem to have no doubt that the Cougar will always be among us.

THOMAS E. MCANALLY: "I found that cutting wood by myself, full-time, was better than any other job I've had... I get exercise and all that. Sometimes not the right kind, but the hours are my own."

County's federal funds total $607 million

Pine Cone Washington Bureau

Monterey County received more than $607 million in federal outlays in fiscal 1975 — predictably more than two-thirds of that came from Defense Department spending.

Of the $423 million Defense spent, more than $250 million was used to pay military personnel stationed at installations located in the county, according to a report from the Community Services Administration.

The civilian payroll for the fiscal year reached $55.7 million, according to CSA.

More than $47 million in military supply, service, construction and research and development contracts was authorized by the department, the report shows. CSA figures also determine $36.7 million was paid out to retired military personnel.

Outlays from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare-totaled $106 million, according to the report. More than $40 million of the HEW outlay went to county residents in Social Security retirement insurance.

Social Security survivors insurance and Medicare hospital insurance cost HEW $12.7 million and $11.2 million, respectively.

Veterans Administration outlays to the county totaled $15 million, according to CSA. More than $6.9 million was spent on veterans readjustment training and $3.3 million was paid out for veterans disability compensation.

Overall, California ranked second among states receiving federal funds, gathering $36.78 billion of the $326.7 billion the government spent in fiscal 1975.

Widely scattered parcels of privately-owned land within the exterior boundaries of the Los Padres Forest are suggested as suitable replacement wildlife habitat by the Fish and Wildlife Service in a recent report outlining what mitigation measures they might require in the event another dam is constructed at the San Clemente site. Some of the land is but a few miles from Hunter Liggett Military Reservation in south Monterey County.

preventing access to the stream by anadramous fish. -- It would inundate 1,000 of quality upland wildlife habitat and eight miles of riparian habitat.

-I would destroy 100 acres of upland habitat by excavation for borrow material.

-It would create a 1,000 acre lake.

--It would encourage residential and commercial development of Cachagua Valley and the lower Carmel River flood plain to the disadvantage of fish and wildlife habitat.

The report spoke to the question of the relationship between local short-term use of man's environment and maintenance and enhancement of long-term environmental productivity:

"The short-term use of the environment would produce benefits in the form of flood protection for residences and business structure, municipal and industrial water for Carmel Valley and other communities, and improvement of downstream riparian habitat, but would adversely affect long-term environmental productivitywith respect to fish and wildlife resources.

"The change of riparian and upland habitats to an aquatic environment, together with urban expansion that would follow reservoir construction would foreclose some future land use options and impair the ability of the area to support its present biota."

My plan is to talk a little and listen a lot and try to accomplish our task in a practicable and sensible manner, hearing every viewpoint and considering all of the alternatives.

As I listen to voters of the district, I find that everyone is concerned about our economic situation. We have high unemployment in I will do my very best to this area, high inflation, sky- attempt to find solutions rocketing property tax bills, increased assessments, and inadequate resource manage- realities. An extraordinary operatic experience

IRVING W. GREENBERG

Last Friday, the Hidden Valley Music Seminars Opera Ensemble mounted the West Coast premiere of a contemporary, psychological American opera, titled "Black River," composed by Conrad Susa, with a libretto by Richard Street, assisted by Conrad Susa. The opera is set in Black River Falls, Wisconsin at the turn of the century, and it is concerned with the mother, and her short-lived lives of three women, who, marriage. Told in flash-although loosely related, have one common bond expressive grief and ineffable loneliness. The opera is conceived in a Prologue and three acts. The first act is devoted to the psychotic. almost schizophrenic Clara Gray; the second, to Pauline L'Allemand, a rather faded operatic singer of a highly unstable emotional nature; and the third, to Lucy Gray, Clara's step-daughter, and to the various vicissitudes during her life with her step-backs, with the background of the river as a symbolic portent, the libretto digs. deeply into the mores of this little Winconsin town, so typical of all such inbred small enclaves. Its roots reach far down into the American psyche, and it becomes a spectacle in its unfolding drama. Whether Thomas Wolfe's "Of Time and the River" was the embryonic germ that sparked the idea of the libretto is a viable thought, but it could be merely incidental.

In the Prologue, with the Chorus' entrance in slow cadences marching backwards in Time, there was immediately established a dramatic, symbolic and impassioned statement.

Mary Hinrichs, as the neurotic mother, at odds with her step-daughter, and still mourning for her son now dead twelve years, gives a depiction of a role that is musically affirmative and sound, and her impressionistic in her conception. In recalling the various incidents in her past life, one of the most affecting and compelling is the scene. of a day in church.

Here, with John Giger portraying the Reverend Woods with unctuous piety, her dead son, is so effectively dramatic, both musically and histrionically, that she assumes the character of a ritualistic Greek tragic personality.

In the second act, we are introduced to Pauline Allemand, this role being here assumed by Sue Hinshaw-Goreniuc, who, in her fantasies and reminiscences about her past life. projects this part with intense vocalism in the upper high register of her voice, without any stridency or harshness to mar the evocation. Dramatically, her performance puts her emotions and feelings into an elemental psychotic totality. Her attempt at coloratura phrasing, recalling snatches of her former repertoire of Delibes, Boito, and Mozart, is accomplished with a totally integrated and accented tonality.

Her projection is controlled and its lyric implications merely tend to emphasize the purity of her tonal register and its concomitant perceptive and emotional insight. Her descriptive and alliterative exposition of these contrasting factets give her tonal pronouncement its

Michael Rosso, acting as her many-guised partner in this act, in rather short appearances, still does have one duet with her in which he helps to make this singing powerful, intensive and significant. By the way, she was a historical figure, born Elhassar, in Syracuse, New York, in 1862.

In the third act, given over mainly to Lucy Gray, Clara's step-daughter, and in this production assumed by the exquisite Pamela Hicks, there is a frenetic, almost uncontrollable depiction of there is established an an- her abiding hate for her steptiphonal relationship bet- mother, in an emotional ween the minister and Clara, outburst of expressiveness that is presented in a manner and power. Her apparent grief at the loss of her recent husband, Ben, is replete with a plethora of plaintiveness and sorrow in a highly emotionalized and in a vocally pervasive and persuasive manner.

Ben, played by Marc Cervania, is portrayed in various aspects of his rather short life, with measured nuances and tonal sequences that establish him as a goodnatured, but rather weak character, as implied in the libretto. Reg Huston, as Horace Gray, Clara's husband, and also as Jacob Spaulding, founder of Black River Falls, shows strength of depiction, vocal power, and a distinct flair for displaying a towering, brutal role, in the case of Spaulding.

As an aftermath, in this act, all three women decide to leave Black River Falls, each in her own manner, and each with a certain joyful attitude of acceptance and resignation. Clara, consistent with the method of her mother in her suicide, immolates herself with kerosene, thus finding release. Lucy leaves town by a self-determined decision character, and effort, dreading

Pauline, released from the State Institution at Mendota, as a ward of the State, by the intercession of her son paying her bond, and going since he is now a successful and rather well-off musician.

The Chorus ends this operatic sequence, by now reversing its role, by marching forward into the Future of Time, symbolically, illustrating the episodic character of the operatic design and purpose.

The almost Breughelian kermesse in the saloon by members of the Chorus is exceptionally worthy of note, because of its implied contrast in mentalities between them and the Temperance group that interrupts their revels. Also, in this scene, John Giger, ably assumes the additional short role of the Indian Chief, in a suggestive treatment of a minority by the ruling White majority.

Randall Bare conducts and directs all of these vocal and instrumental forces with an all-consuming intensity. His beat is forceful, direct, and incisive, and really brings to life this music, which is not only distinctly lyrical at times, but is highly ingratiating to the listener, having no real elements of dissonance or atonality. The Orchestra, as an ensemble in unison, is ever responsive to his musical and emotional direction.

Robert Darling is the accomplished and innovative stage designer, who has played such a major role in former productions here, and who is, in no small part, an integral force in establishing the success of this opera also. This opera, originally conceived for the Minnesota Opera Co., and premiered there in the fall of 1975, won at that time an unqualified citation for its spirft and poetic nature.

The Hidden Valley Music Seminars is to be congratulated for putting on such a difficult work, and to have put it on in such a magnificent and hugely successful manner. Peninsula music lovers are urged not to miss this inspirational and unusual performance, as it will still be playing the next two week-ends.

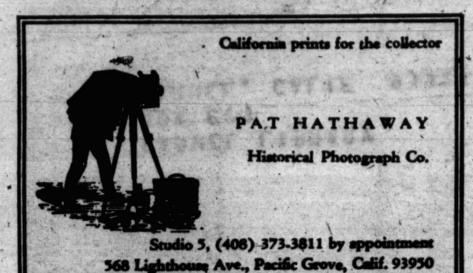

"OH, COWARD!" is returning to the Studio Theatre for a limited engagement beginning Friday, May 28. Harrison Shields, LaVonne Rae Andrews and Bob Lester are featured in the

NEW RECORDINGS

SCOTTISH FOLK SONGS, arranged by Haydn and Beethoven (Janet Baker, mezzo-soprano; Yeudi Menuhin, violin; George Malcolm, harpsichord and piano - Angel S-37172).

On this disc are to be found seventeen songs arranged by Haydn and five songs arranged by Beethoven. While these arrangements of the Scottish melodies by Haydn and Beethoven can in no way be considered an important part of their musical output, still they do provide an insight into an unexpected, charming, and interesting facet, of this type of accommodation by two of the greatest composers.

Due to the promptings of one, William Napier, a Scottish musician and music publisher, Haydn was persuaded to set a number of Scottish songs with figured bass for a keyboard instrument, and a violin accompaniment, as a desperate measure of help to Napier in his critical business period. These were so successful that Napier's business was not only saved, but he was also able to pay Haydn for this set, as well as doubling the fee for a second set.

As regards the arrangements by Beethoven, he was approached by George Thomson of Edinburgh, with this idea. Although Beethoven felt that this type of work was below his musical interest or level, still be complied with Mr. Thomson's request in order to make some extra money, allowing him the opportunity to work on his more worthwhile compositions, such as the Missa Solemnis, The Hammerklavier Sonata, and the Ninth Symphony.

In projecting these songs, Janet Baker, surely one of the finest artists singing today, does so with her usual exceptional fine taste, her rare sensitivity and subtlety, and her characteristic interpretive mastery. Her warmth of expression, her richness and brilliance of her tonal range, tend to bring out all of the nuances and variegated color inherent in these songs. The pathos, the vocal respendency, the contemplative spirit of these small gems are clearly and infectiously evoked. The Beethoven arrangements, unquestionably, are the most vivid, vital and most translucently luminous, and they are so interpreted.

Of the Haydn settings, the most outstanding are: "My Ain Kind Dearie:" and "My Boy Tammy;" while of the Beethoven arrangements, the following are most compelling: "Polly Stewart;" "The Sweetest Lad was Jamie;" and "Faithful Johnie."

Unquestionably, only Miss Baker's sense of inspiration and her consummate and impeccable musicianship could have brought these small art forms into a focus of living and breathing realism.

Basketry exhibited

An Exhibition of American Indian Basketry has been installed at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History. On view at present are baskets from California tribes. In July a section will be replaced with Southwest Indian basketry. This will be followed in August with basketry from the Northwest Coast. The total to be shown over the summer numbers over 400 specimens making up the collection of the museum.

The museum's collection was recently annotated by Dr. Lawrence E. Dawson, museum senior thropologist the of University of California, Berkeley, through a grant furnished by the American Association of State and Local History. Using styles of weave and the elements used, Dr. Dawson was able to properly identify each of the baskets shown.

The exhibition includes extremely rare Costanoan baskets from the local area which were recently bequeathed to the museum by Ethel Wolter Hyde of Monterey. One of these is a winnowing tray called a "walahin" in the Costanoan language. The other is a feather basket appearing much like those of northern California but including weaving methods not used there. Other baskets being shown are cooking baskets called "mush boilers" by the Yokuts and the Maidu who made them.

As stated in the exhibition, basketry is the oldest textile art known and is a product of thousand of years of survival

Sunset Views:

By FRANK H. RILEY Director, SCCC

Usually when a new exhibit is put on display at Sunset Center, art critic, Irene Lagorio, appears to write a review that sooner or later appears in the paper to give everyone a clue as to what to expect and send many of you scampering down here to see it. But this time the tables have been turned or is it a horse of a different color? Anyway, Lagorio, is the artist and it is her exhibit, "On Stage and Back Stage" that has just been hung in the Sunset Center Theatre foyer. The show consists of a number of watercolor impressions of the shows, the performers, and the people who, between them, comprise the onstage and backstage aspects of many of the productions that are presented at the theatre. Done in bright theatrical color and with a sparkling sense of humor, these sketched impressions make for a most delightful show. Each item is accompanied by a commentary by the artist concerning the motivation for its creation. It is not essential that one has seen all of the productions and concerts represented to enjoy the exhibit; but if one has seen the performances, then, as the old radio jingle used to say, it will "Double your pleasure. Double your fun." Don't miss this delightful exhibit. It will remain until June 28 and is open whenever an event is scheduled in the theatre; or it will be opened at any other time by arrangement with the Sunset Center manager's office.

So much for this immediate special event. We now call your attention to an upcoming special event - or more correctly a whole series of special events. We refer to the annual series of free Sunday afternoon programs at the Forest Theater on Mountain View at Santa Rita. Each Sunday afternoon during July and August at 2 p.m. the Carmel Cultural Commission and the City of Carmel will be presenting a program for your enjoyment. All sorts of performing arts are included — dance, music, and drama band, chorusus, and shows. Admission is always free and everyone is welcome to attend (though it would be nice if you left the family dog at home). The complete list of performances has been given to all area papers, radio, and television stations, so you will undoubtedly be reading and hearing about them. For your own copy of the schedule, stop in at our office or at the Harrison Memorial Library or at City Hall. They will be available at all of these places. We urge you to plan to spend many of your summer Sunday afternoons at these pleasant matinee performances.

As for immediate offerings at Sunset Center, we list the following:

Thursday, May 27 — Hadassah presents its Third Annual Plant Sale in around Room No. 10 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Friday, May 28 — The Peninsula's Ballet Fantasque joins to give a dance program with the San Francisco Dance Sepctrum at Sunset Center Theatre at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at Julie Marlowe's in Room 8A or call 624-9446.

transformation of a prairie wallflower, and its songs are by Harvey Schmidt and Tom Jones, the pair who wrote the popular musical, "The Fantasticks."

The setting for "110 in the Shade" is a town in the Southwestern plains country at a time of drought, and the action centers around a family of ranchers, a father. and two sons, who are not only worried about a lack of rain but also a lack of suitors for the old-maidish daughter of the house.

The answer to both the rain-deficiency and the suitor-deficiency seems answered when a fasttalking wanderer turns up in a beat-up car that he calls a Rainwagon and promises to produce drizzles, showers, downpours and cloudbursts for a mere $100.

At this swashbuckler of the plains goes about his conjuring of water out of the sky, he also begins to work a magic upon the lovelorn daughter Lizzie, teaching her to appreciate herself and to stop scorning the idiot things that other girls do and so get herself a man.

Even though the bigtalking rainmaker is a faker and fails to produce a drop of precipitation for the rancher's parched crops, he fidence and love into Lizzie's parched heart, so that she learns how to win the reluctant sheriff she pines

Sixteen ballads and lively songs embellish this tale of homespun people in the same colorful plains-country as was the background of "Oklahoma." These tunes range from the slow and indolent first number "Another Hot Day" to a scampering and racy ditty called "Little Red Hat," the rousing "Rain Song" and a rustic mood number, "Everything Beautiful Happens at Night."

In addition to Kathy Collins Danny and Gochnauer in the roles of rainmaker and pupil, the cast includes Drake Russell as File, the sheriff Lizzie has her eyes on, Robert J. Berman as her anxious father, H.C. Curry, and Don Nyman and Robbie St. John as her brothers Noah and Jimmie.

The director is Bill Asp. Danny Gochnauer designing the prairiecountry settings and Pauline Thomas is attending to the score's tempo as music director.

Highway 1 folk are the luckiest people in the world. Having lived through the industrial dullness of Philadelphia and its Middle Atlantic Coast environs before making it to Monterey a few years ago, let me just remind all my regular readers that there is a reason we will be jammed to the rafters with visitors starting this holiday weekend - we happen to live in the most beautiful part of the United States.

To Peninsula visitors who plan to head south after enjoying Carmel and vicinity, let me make the following travel suggestion. Take Highway 1 as opposed to 101. Enjoy the beautiful Central Coast and then take Route 46 just after Cambria and prepare yourself for the most breathtaking farmland you have ever seen. I passed that way last weekend on a return trip from Santa Barbara and believe me -Mother Nature has prepared for your coming.

AND ALL THAT JAZZ: This weekend's best deal has to be the Sixth Annual High School Band Competition for the upcoming Monterey Jazz Festival. Jimmy Lyons has even provided for a free concert on Saturday evening at MPC at 7 p.m. featuring the fine jazz men that will judge the weekend festivities. If the names Ralph Humphrey, Pat Williams, Ray Drummond, Mundell Lowe, Ashley Alexander, Benny Golson and Bobby Shew whet your musical appetities, head over to the College for a great holiday treat Circle Star Theatre has a fine lineup of Downbeat award winners coming to their stage on June 11-13. How about Grover Washington, Jr., Stanley Turrentine and Freddie Hubbard on the same bill? Well worth the jaunt to San Carlos, I think The Captain's Cove Restaurant on Cannery Row is featuring the fine jazz vocalist Len Dixon Thursday through Saturday evenings from 8:30 till 1. Dixon, who has paid his dues on the Nevada circuit, is a Berkeley native who first started at the Hungry i in the days of the Smothers Brothers and Phyllis Diller.

He's backed by Jeff Boyns on piano and bassist Bob Barr. There isn't a smoother act in town Monterey now has two jazz jams on Sunday afternoon. Mr. Dixon is at the Cove from 3 to 7 and the Barrel House in downtown Monterey draws some of the town's best musicians from 2 to 6.

Carmel author Rosemary Rogers continues to take the publishing world by storm. Her fourth novel, "Wicked Loving Lies", is due in paperback in October but it will also be the featured selection of the Doubleday Book Club in September. Are you ready for the latest figures on her first three works? "Sweet Savage Love" now has 1,896,000 copies in print; "The Wildest Heart" 1,401,000 copies and "Dark Fires" has 2,224,000 copies in circulation.

Vicki and Paul, currently headlining the Holiday Inn Monterey, finished their first recording session at Supersound Studios in Monterey on Monday night. Two songs are now in the can and more studio work will take place in San Diego in about two weeks after their local gig is completed Carmel resident Chesley Bonestell was honored recently in the 50th anniversary edition of "Amazing Science Fiction" with a story devoted to his illustrative work in the sci-fi genre. Bonestell, who worked on many George Pal efforts as well as the immortal "Day The Earth Stood Still", is quoted by Amazin' as saying "Once having seen it, you must draw or paint so that others can see it. Not the thing itself, but the way it seems, that is art."

ideas, while the third is a Largo which, while not a funeral march, has a funeral character. Between them comes a scherzo in a light, whimsical manner. In the finale, in rondo form, the music is by turns dramatic and virtuoso, but of such compelling brilliance that it has been said that is the subject matter, in the handling, in scope, and in sheer sonorous beauty, it is one of the major musical achievements after Beethoven.

The Liszt Sonata in B minor does not follow traditional lines. It is more a fantasia, or a tone poem, for piano, than a sonata. Diffuse and at times prolix, the work also possesses a singular eloquence and power. It is in a single movement, in which the introduction presents the principal thematic ideas: a dramatic subject in octaves; a forceful and epical statement; and a marcato passage for the bass. Later on, religious sentiment is introduced with a stirring chorale; there also appears a lyrical section with a Beethoven-like nobility. A brilliant prestissimo section, in which earlier material is reviewed, brings the sonata to an exciting end.

Recorded early in 1930, this disc suffers because of this early recording technique, and the gritty surfaces, in its transfer from 78. But, in spite of these technical deficiencies, as well as the many liberties that Cortot took with the tempi and the dynamics, it is still a remarkable, poetic document of authoritative integrity and erudite interpretation. There is a pervasive depth and a solemn dignity in the conception, and a myriad amount of tonal coloration, and impressive nuance delineation. Cortot's sonority was outstanding, and it furnished a model for many years of how his sustained passage work, and the magnificent tonal contrast of the musical contours, with the serenity and the assurance of its rendition.

On these accounts, it is recommended for inclusion in a piano record library.

BRAHMS: SONATA NO. 2 IN A MAJOR, Op. 100 -PROKOFIEV: SONATA NO. 1 IN F MINOR, Op. 80 (David Oistrakh, violin - Sviatoslav Richter, plano - Angel-Melodya SR-40268).

The Brhams Sonata No. 2 in A major, Op. 100 for Violin and Piano, is the so-called "Thun" Sonata, because Brahms wrote it at Lake Thun in Austria during a summer holiday. The main theme of the first movement resembles the famous "Prize Song" from Wanger's "Die Meistersingers." Song dominates this sonata, many of whose themes have the spaciousness of lieder. Most of the expressive lyricism is reserved for the middle movement. The finale is in the composer's characteristic Hungarian vein, vitalized by actual Hungarian folk melodies and dance rhythms.

The Prokofiev Sonata No. 1 in F minor, Op. 80, was inspired by the famous violin sonata in D oh Handel, and, indeed, the four movement slow-fast-slow-fast plan of the work does recall the outline of the typical baroque sonata. However, the archaic influence in this work goes deeper than mere architecture. The opening movement, with its almost Bachian passage-work for the violinist, and the starkly-lined, brusque thematic nuggets of the ensuing movement contribute strongly to this almost intellectual ambience. Only in the intensely lyrical, flowing Andante and in the wild abandoned Finale with its marvelously fluid rhythmic scheme, does Prokofiev reveal his familiar guise as the startling innovator of his time. The work, as a whole, is austere, reticent, and completely revealing.

Both these sonatas were recorded at a "live" concert performance at the Moscow Conservatory in 1972, by these two of Russia's most prestigious musicians — the late David Oistrakh and the living Sviatoslav Richter, the former, one of the most superb violinists, and the latter, an exacting and compelling pianist. They perform these two sonatas with grace, poise, passion, and lyric expressiveness. Their interpretation bears the modicum of erudition and authenticity of a definitive reading. Oistrakh's famous long bowing line, his dazzling glissandos, and his incomparable trills, runs, and arpeggios, are set forth in violin playing of the most ineffable type. Equally so, does Richter elicit magnificent proportions, and dynamic levels, phrasing, intonation, and articulation, that adds his share of playing to a performance of unforgettable relief and masterly focus. Together, they are more than equal to the individual sum of their parts, exhibit a perfect rapport and musical balance, thus resulting in a performance that has the noblest and most invigorating features of the musical art.

The tone quality of both instruments is clear, vibrant, and highly responsive, although some audience noises do intrude from time to time, and the applause at the end of each sonata indicates its origin. This disc is highly recommended, on the basis of a wonderful exhibition and a "rememberance," at least to all devotees of Oistrakh, Richter and Oistrakh and Richter.

ANGEL ROMERO: SPANISH VIRTUOSO (Angel S-36094)
On this disc, Angel is presenting Angel Romero in solo romantic pieces on the guitar by Granados, Albeniz, Turina, Rodrigo, Tarrega and Moreno Torroba.

Moreno Torrobas' "Madronos" is based on the haunting rhythm of a popular Spanish street cry. The Albeniz "Cordoba" is atmospheric music with ardent and soft melodies, while his "Tango" is uniquely Iberian in its thematic display.

Granados' "La Maja de Goya," inspired by the drawings and paintings of the great Spanish artist, Francisco Goya, is the first in a set of such impressions, which Granados wrote for the voice, sung to a guitar accompaniment.

The Rodrigo "Fandango" is in the typical dance's dramatic flamenco-style rhythms. The Turina "Fandanguillo" (little fandango) is a highly rhapsodic variation from the triple-time rhythms of the basic fandango. Turina's "Garrotin-Soleares-Rafaga" is each a flamenco dance rhythm — vignettes of classical elegance and style.

The Tarrega "Preludes Nos. 2 and 5" are two of the most romantic composition in the traditional classic form; while this composer's "Mazurka-Mariete-Marie-and-Adelita" are dance forms combining various styles of European and Spanish dance forms — here the basic rhythms are those of the mazurka and the gavotte.

Angel Romero, one of the famous "Four Romeros," debuts on this record with guitar pieces of a solo nature. His sustained brilliance, his elegant mastery of his instrumental technique, and his highly-colored, warm and rich quality of his projection, all proclaim the "master" guitarist. He shows a rare discipline and absorbing involvement, uncompromising in his insistence on the finest standards. His rhythmic, harmonic and tasteful evocation of the musical figuration are just additional elements in the evocation of the assured and secured playing of these pieces. So vitally does he assert his skillful delineation and his virtuoso display, that they vibrantly come to the fore on the classical yardstick of the Spanish folk-song mystique. Of all these pieces, this reviewer found the Tarrega and the Turina works the most ingratiating and appealing, because of the exceptional skill and fantasy with which Angel Romero imbued these pieces.

The guitar tone, a fragile and tin-sounding instrument in concert, is most resonant and compelling in this recording. This disc can be unhesitatingly recommended to all "afficionados" of this instrument, who may desire to witness the exceptional musicianship of this rising young "star."

RIMSKY-KORSAKOV: SYMPHONY NO. 2, OP. 9 "ANTAR;" CAPRICCIO ESPAGNOL (Moscow Radio Symphony Orchestra conducted by Konstantin Ivanov — Angel-Melodya SR-40230).

The Symphony No. 2, Op. 9, the "Antar," is a programmatic work based on an Arabian legend of the sixth century. This tale concerns Antar, who, having saved a gazelle from a monster, falls asleep and dreams that he is in the palace of the fairy Guel-Nazar. The fairy, who proves to be the gazelle, MONDAY THRU SATURDAY 10-5 624-2146 INCARMEL-BY-THE-SEA Antar has saved, offers him the three greatest delights of the world: Vengeance, power, and love. After he has accepted these gifts, Antar awakes.

The first movement recreates the story of the legend. The next three movements are each devoted to one of the delights of the world, as above. A motto theme describing Antar courses throughout the symphony; it is first heard in the violas in the introduction to the first movement. In this section, there also appears the theme of the fairy, in flute and horns. The Antar theme is prominent in the second movement. The third movement is a heroic march, symbolic of the power of an oriental potentate. The principal love theme of the fourth movement is presented by the English horn, and has an oriental character.

The five-movement Capriccio Espagnol is an elaboration of popular Spanish melodies. I. Alborado: morning song, has two main subjects, both given by the orchestra; II. Variations: a theme for horns and five variations; III. Alborado: The opening melody returns changed in pitch and instrumentation. IV. Scene and Gypsy Dance: This part consists of five cadenzas. V. Fandango asturiano: A vigorous dance presented by trombones is contrasted with a secondary subject in woodwinds. The Capriccio ends with a final statement of the melody of the first movement.

The spaciousness, the exotic, the tonal color, and the romantic and sentimental lyricism of both of these works are brought out in a dazzling reading by the Moscow Radio Symphony Orchestra under Konstantin Ivanov. This conductor has the taste, and the rare ability to shape the musical phraseology, hold it to an unaccustomed dynamic level, and then round it off to a climactic and exciting conclusion. The shimmering instrumental cadenzas, by the harp the flute, the richly and brilliantly evocative cello sonorities, and the fabulous fortissimo effects of the drums, and the timpani, all add up to a performance of these two colorful compositions in which are combined brilliance, luminosity, and passion into a magnificent tapestry of kaleidoscopic musical iridescence. Furthermore, the singing and plaintive tones of the strings accentuate the rhythmic and harmonic exponents of the musical writing.

The orchestral tone is warm, rich, and exceedingly luscious. This disc bears the label of the highest recommendation, especially if one seeks a "definitive" rendition of these two highly spectacular works.

Straight Talk from UCB/Number 6

Will your banker bite you when you ask for a loan?

It's often said that "Banks lend money only to people who don't need it." But today's banker likes to say "Yes."

We smile more than we bite.

If we can justify making a loan to you, it's good business for the bank. A thought that makes any banker smile.

Ask where to find a loan officer at the New Accounts desk. Then tell him or her who you are, and how much you'd like to borrow. That short speech should result in an invitation to talk.

We lend for lots of reasons.

UCB, like most banks, lends money for fun things like a cruise. For things that enrich, like college tuition. For emergencytype things, like helping your Dad with his medical bills. And for any good reason.

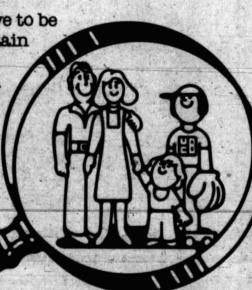

If you tell us you're going to buy something, we may ask if you've shopped for it. And about what it will cost. We believe that it's smart to be informed before you buy.

All banks are nosy. (They have to be.)

They'd go out of business if they kept making bad loans. And bad loans often result when a lender doesn't check applicants carefully.

Maybe that sounds hard-boiled. But banks aren't the Community Chest. Their job is lending out depositors' money at a profit.

So they have to be reasonably certain that borrowers can – and mean to – repay. Our application form helps determine this.

Our application won't bite you.

The application form asks for information. You can fill it out at the bank, or take it home and mail it back.

We check out, or verify, the information on it. But the application isn't long or complicated. We've simplified it. Here's some of what it covers:

Personal questions. Like where you live, and for how long. Marital status. How many dependents. Whether you rent or own your home. Such information helps us make sure you're really you.

Income questions. Where you work. How much your regular income is. What other income you have. This information affects your ability to handle loan payments.

Debt questions. What you owe in loans, mortgage payments, car payments. Who your creditors are. This information helps establish your credit record. And whether your total debt load seems reasonable or risky.

Yes. We lend to single women.

We also lend to single men. Also to people of both sexes who are married. The Dark Ages of credit discrimination on the basis of sex or marital status were ended last year by law. High time, too.

Yes. We lend to married women.

A decade or so ago, married women seldom, if ever, came in and asked us for a loan.

But the times they are a' changing.
And today, married women, for lots of different reasons are finding that they want or need credit in their own name.

And, if they qualify – like anybody else has to qualify – they'll get it.

So if you fit the description, and have the need, come see us. You'll get a warm reception.

Yes. We lend to those who've split.

Are you separated? Divorced?
You, too, can apply for credit. If your income qualifies, you don't have to list other income, such as alimony, child support, etc. But if you do list such money, we need to verify how regularly you receive it. So it helps if you bring in any papers (like deposit receipts) that show you've been receiving payments on schedule.

How about credit references? If they're in your name, no problem. If they're in your spouse's name, or the names of both of you, there may still be a way to credit-check them separately.

Our loans aren't like everybody's.

At UCB, we make all kinds of loans, including simple interest personal loans which most banks don't make. (You pay interest only for the actual time you have the money. And there's no penalty if you pay up the loan before the due date.) These loans cover nearly every money need. To buy a car. Improve your home. Buy a hang glider.

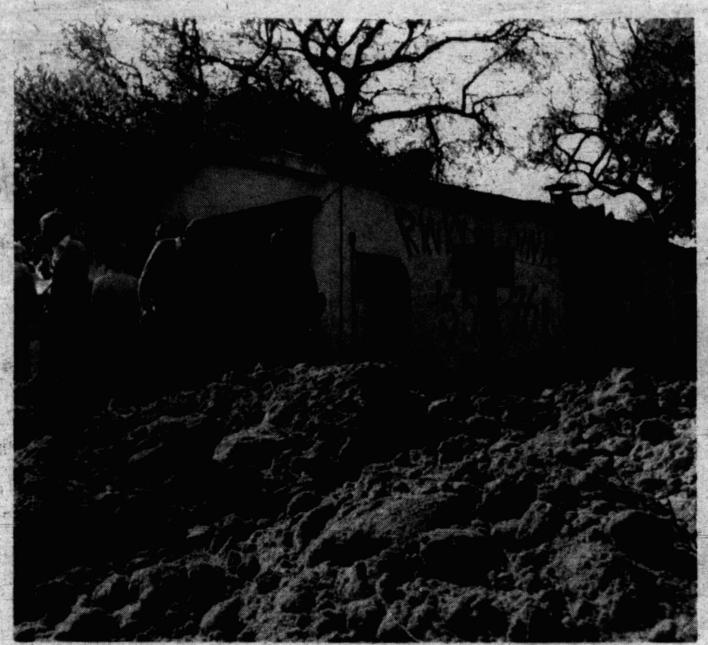

Is 24 hours quick enough for you?

We don't dilly-dally. If you've done business with UCB before, we try to say "Yes" or "Sorry, no" the same day we get your simple interest personal loan application. If you're new to us, it can take about 24 hours.

At any of our 260 branches, the loan officer you talk to can be more definite about how long it takes. Whatever you ask us, we'll give it to you straight.

Get it straight from UCB.

THE GRAND CLOSING of the Rinky Dink last Friday may have been premature. A "Save the Rinky Dink" group has been formed and is in the process of locating a new home for the old burger stand.

WITH A CROWD in attendance and watching anxiously, the Rinky Dink was moved to a vacant lot on Mission last Sunday. The lot, near 8th Street, is only a temporary home while a more permanent location is found.

Planners pass mini-mall — again

Two once-controversial projects — now in different form — came before the Carmel Planning Commission May 19: Carmel Plaza's mini-mall and a food service establishment application for the old Parson's Antiques store site.

The mini-mall, on the corner of Mission and 7th streets at the southwest corner of the Carmel Plaza, won approval for its storefront design. Since the project will be completely enclosed, the committee on design review has no control over the shops in the minimall's interior.

The mini-mall concept was previously okayed by the planning commission and denied by the City Council.

Having been turned down by both the commission and council for his plan to replace Parson's with a delicatessen, Carles F. Swanston came before the commission with an application for a lunch counter to be placed in his proposed fish market.

Although the fish market itself is a permitted use under city code, several commissioners questioned Swanston about possible odor problems.

Swanston explained that 98 per cent of the fish coming into his market would already be preapred and that the rest of the waste products would go through a disposal and into the sewer system — not into the garbage cans.

Commissioner Robert Stephenson questioned the odor coming from cooking fish, but Swanston assured him odors would be minimal due to a venting system and the fact that very little cooking would be done on the premises. Swanston said a soup and a clam chowder were the only things requiring cooking.

The only part of Swanston's proposal actually under consideration by the board of adjustments was the 14-stool lunch counter, and that issue was referred to the land use committee.

The board did approve expansion of the seating capacity of the Royal Danish Pastry Shop on Dolores and an antique shop to replace Trestor Gallery on Monte Verde and Ocean, but three other matters were also referred to land use.

— An application for a variance to allow Donald W. Sheldon to increase building coverage on his Scenic Drive lot. Sheldon wanted the additional coverage for a rain protector but one neighbor argued: If one of the best architects in the area can't design a building that can keep people coming in from getting wet without a variance, maybe the code should be changed.

— Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell applied for a permit to place a utility sink in their legal non-conforming guest house on Casanova between 13th and Santa Lucia.

 Doris Klumb requested that artwork be granted display space outside her gallery at the corner of San Carlos and 7th streets.

Design approval was granted to a guest house application made by Seldon Smith and to redesign projects at the Tally-Ho Inn, Village Electric, Mark I. Starr, Carmel Mineral Arts, Cafe Figaro and the Carriage House.

Robert Strum, the newest commissioner, was named by Chairman Ed Neroda to join him on the ad hoc advisory traffic-circulation committee, which will also include representatives of the City Council and the Carmel Business Association.

NEW PROBLEMS CONFRONTED AS RECORD CROWD VISITS CITY

The Memorial Day weekend in Carmel and the Peninsula section witnessed the largest crowd in its history. Hotels, restaurants and rooming houses were taxed to capacity, and scores of persons, unable to secure lodgings, spent the night in their automobiles. Still others camped in somewhat primitive fashion along the beaches, particularly the Point. The extended three-day holiday was undoubtedly largely responsible, as thousands of city and desert residents accepted the opportunity for cool seashore recreation.

While perhaps no serious damage was done, it was quite evident that many of the campers had no regard for the natural beauties of the Carmel seashore, which others have come hundreds of miles to see and enjoy. Many of the campers drove quite ruthlessly over the flowers and shrubbery, and littered their camping places with refuse of every description.

The great majority of folks were appreciative and were careful not to destroy anything; but on the other hand, there were a large number of the careless element present, who if allowed to proceed unmolested would be only too glad to turn the ocean front into a sort of Coney Island. And these left their destructive marks wherever they went.

The real estate agents had a busy time of it, and it is reported that a number of lots were purchased by future residents. The traffic on Ocean Avenue and other principal streets was equivalant to that of a city boulevard.

The Seventeen Mile Drive was crowded with automobiles, and according to the gatekeeper Jack Buttle more than 2,000 automobiles passed through the Pacific Grove entrance on Sunday, making the largest number on record.

61 TO GET DIPLOMAS ON JUNE 8

Wearing navy blue caps and gowns a Carmel High School senior class of 61 will receive their diplomas Friday evening at 8 in Sunset Auditorium. Student speakers will be Suzanne Smith, Conrad Egge and Pat Merivale, valedictorian. This will be the eleventh Carmel High School commencement.

The class will be ushered in to the music of the high school band under the direction of John Farr, playing the traditional Pomp and Circumstance.

Dr. K. Filmore Gray will give the invocation, and following the salute to the flag, the audience will join the graduates in singing The Star Spangled Banner.

The student talks that follow will be interspersed with music from the string quartet and vocal numbers from the senior ensemble.

The class gift, about $300 for the purchase of portable bleachers, will be presented by Dorothea Baine, senior class president.

After school superintendent Stuart Mitchell presents the class, chairman of the board Harold Nielsen will hand out the diplomas, Lloyd Miller, class sponsor, announcing the names.

Dr. Gray closes the ceremony with Benediction and the high school band playing "Triumphal March" from "Aieda," accompanies the recessional.

Parents and friends will gather in the patio after the exercises at an informal reception to congratulate the graduates.

SUNSET COMMISSION BUDGET CONSIDERATION

Whether or not the city council means to retain the present Sunset Center structure was a question which occupied the Sunset commission on Monday. Should the council decide to keep the existing structure, then steps must be taken to make them attractive was the consensus arrived at during the meeting.

Commissioner Jean van Loben Sels suggested asking the council whether or not it favored retention or replacement of the facilities, also to give a decision on whether or not the city hall will be moved to the Sunset site. (The year's moratorium on this matter ends next month.)

Commissioner Ted Fehring said he felt strongly that the present buildings should be preserved and enhanced. Commissioner Franke Falge pointed out the necessity of maintaining and restoring the structures.

Chairman Peter Dyer suggested that the commission undertake 1966-67 budget consideration from the point of view of retention of the present buildings for at least five years.

Salad days are here again

Salad Days are here again and we can indulge in them without tremor when we realize it is the dressing that makes a difference. Every day is salad day in California and the perfect formula is to assemble the properly washed crisped greens of different textures and shades such as romaine, bibb, red, butter, Boston and iceberg mixed with fresh baby spinach tendrils and curly endive. The real Belgian white endive while expensive does add eclat and superior flavor.

The dressing must be concocted of the highest items... such as Sauce Vinaigrette: This is the classic of France made with restraint. There should not be a drop of this left in an olive wood oiled bowl after the salad is tossed. Party Plans believes in three parts purest olive oil to one part white wine vinegar. If you prefer, cut the oil with fresh lemon juice but not the bitter kind. If you want a fruity oil, soak several large pitted ripe olives in the oil along with some slivers of fresh garlic to give it body and extra subtle flavor.

A Green and Gold Salad becomes a masterpiece with slices of oranges arranged on crisp lettuce leaves. Sprinkle these with a cottage cheese, crisp bacon bits orange juice dressing. Very invigorating for young and older. You could make those clever little puffs to go with these salads and others that follow. French Mini Puffs: Melt 1/2 cup butter in 1 cup boiling water. Add 1 cup sifted flour with a speck of salt all at one time. Stir vigorously until mixture comes to a boil. Reduce heat and cook while stirring until mixture leaves sides of pan. Remove from heat. Add 4 eggs one at a time; beat well after each addition until smooth and well blended. Drop from tip of teaspoon on a greased cookie sheet. Bake at 450 F. 10 minutes, one inch apart, reduce heat to 325 F. 10 more minutes. Remove with spatula. Cool, then cut off top of each puff... these should be golden brown and hollow. Makes about 4 doz. Fill with chicken, crab tuna or shrimp salad and a minimum of mayonnaise to moisten; add minced celery, chives, lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste. Set tops back on before serving.

The most superb meal-in-itself is Salade Nicoise which had its origin in Nice on the Mediterranean. For 8 good appetites cook 3 cups fresh stringbeans after removing ends and strings. Boil in lightly salted water until just tender. Drain. Quarter 3 firm unpeeled tomatoes. Season these with a little Sauce Vinaigrette, salt and pepper. Toss freshly washed and separated butter lettuce hearts that have been patted dry in a salad bowl with fresh garlic buds. Remove these after 30 min. Boil 3 cups small peeled new potatoes, drain, slice and chill. On a cold large platter put the green beans and tomatoes around edge of dish; put lettuce hearts in center, add potato salad and intersperse with best canned white tuna in chunks; Greek type black shriveled olives, anchovy filets rolled with capers... pour a little of the anchovy oil over same. Top with cold sliced hard cooked eggs. Sprinkle minced fresh parsley and chives over all. This main course salade is served often by Carmelite Germaine Olivie for members of l'Alliance Francaise. Most of her purchases are appropriately made at Carmel's Mediterranean Market.

A unique western salad which my local French and American Carmel friends are captivated by is Caesar Salad a Hollywood original. Put crisp cold salad greens, finger broken and well washed but without a trace of water, into large chilled salad bowl that has been rubbed with a peeled garlic clove. For 3 qts. greens, bite-sized, add ½ cup salad oil, 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese and 1/4 cup mashed blue cheese to which add 1 Tbsps. Worcestershire sauce, ½ tsp. dry mustard, salt and pepper to taste. Break one freshest raw egg over greens and pur over 1/2 cup fresh lemon juice. Toss thoroughly so every leaf is coated with seasonings. On the last toss, add crisp garlic flavored croutons. Makes 8 servings. With this have well heated French bread which break at will at the table. A California red or white wine and that's just right for the experienced or amateur gourmet.

Here is an artistic salad: Cabbage Salad in Garden Sea Shells: Trim nice whole green cabbage leaves to make sea shells. Toss 2 cups shredded green cabbage with 1 can baby shrimp, drained and the latter rinsed in cold water. To this add 10 stuffed olives with 12 cup buttermilk, 14 tsp. celery salt, white pepper and 2 Tbsps. lemon juice. Serve on cabbage leaves rounded to make shells. Top with shrimp and lemon wedges. Hot biscuits in which a bit of butter and guava jelly is inserted in each is the only addition other than coffee or tea for a ladies' lovely bridge luncheon.

Why not a bowl full of Carmel River crawfish that our local friend Andre Degremont brings us whenever possible. They are so sweet and fresh and such a lark to net in the river's sheltered coves. Steam them in sauterne, peel and devein. leaving on tails intact for easy handling as this is deluxe fare. Marinate in a spicy French dressing consisting of olive oil. garlic champagne wine and tarragón red wine vinegar, onion salt, cracked Java pepper, paprika, crushed oregano, sweet basil and rosemary to taste. Drain, saving marinade for another time. Serve on a bed of shredded Iceberg lettuce with avocado slices, sprinkled with lemon juice. Who could ask for more?

Fruit sherbet and lemon wafers. Coffee, tea, wines of your choice along with Italian breadsticks or bought blueberry muffins.

Big Sur fire brigade gets $500

The Independent Insurance Agents of the Monterey Peninsula have presented a check for $500 to the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade.

The Brigade is a nonprofit, volunteer association, created primarily to protect the homes and other buildings of the Big Sur area. It responds to calls as far north as Bixby and to Lucia in the south.

Prior to the formation of the unit, the sole fire protection for Big Sur was given by the U.S. Forest Service, but that was limited to "non-priority structural protection" during the summer or fire season. During the remainder of the year the area has been served only by the Carmel Hill Forest Fire Station, which has a response time of some 60 minutes. Under this new system the Brigade's 12 man crew is always on call, and can respond immediately to calls that come in on the emergency num-

The greatest problem facing the Brigade is how to obtain needed fire-fighting equipment with limited funds. The $500 from the Insurance Agents will go toward the purchase of a used fire truck.

Out on a limb

By GREGORY D'AMBROSIO
City Forester

What will you do for your plants if water rationing becomes a fact of life during later summer and fall? Train your plants now, so that when the time comes, the shock of little or no watering will not cause wilting and die back. Deep irrigating your plants by using a subsurface water spike will provide water where the need is greatest and evaporation will not occur. This form of direct root contact will require much less water while still maintaining a substantial resevoir for the plant to continue normal growth patterns. Subsoil water spikes are attached to normal garden hoses and can be purchased at any garden center. Irrigating is most effective when the water pressure is low. Virtually no runoff will occur. The soil will absorb sufficient moisture within one half hour. Surrounding the plant with a thick layer of mulch, wood chips or tree duff, will maintain a cool and moist soil at the soil surface. Cool soil temperature is extremely important during hot sunny periods because high soil temperatures can cause damage to the microscopic root hairs that supply a plants water requirements. Wetting the mulched areas will provide an environment that may be the difference between life and death of plants during these drought periods.

The Ocean Avenue landscaping project should be completed by mid-June. The blocks between Santa Fe and Carpenter are graded and contoured, and trees have been planted. The landscape shrubs and ground covers will be planted at a much later date. The decision to hold off was made because of our present water shortage. Until we are out of danger and water levels return to normal, landscaping will have to wait.

THE ANNUAL NORTH-SOUTH POLO MATCH will take place Sunday, May 30, at Collins Field, Pebble Beach. The 12 goal match will begin at 2 p.m. under the technical supervision of Richard Collins, director of the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center. Umpire will be E. Fay Humphrey of Menlo Park. Antique jewelry to be exhibited Nomads who once roamed the Russian Steppes still wield their Khyber rifles in the primitive backlands of Afghanistan. Their women, veiled from head to foot, wear intricate silver jewelry which often forms the basis of their family's wealth.

Some of that jewelry, most of it between 150 and 250 years old, will be on display at David's beginning Friday. It comes from the collection of Peterson Conway, a Carmel Valley importer of middle eastern jewelry, carpets and antiques.

According to Conway, the Kazak and Turkoman tribes ranged freely from northern Afghanistan to the Russian Steppes before the 1800s, raising sheep and raiding each other's camps. While the spread of Western civilization limited their range to Afghanistan, it did little to change their lifestyle.

The jewelry in Conway's collection has been used traditionally for trade and for dowry payments. It is often of religious value, with tiny prayers hidden beneath each jewel.

The Kazaks were expert silver craftsmen capable of very small detail work. They often incorporated coral into their jewelry.

The Turkoman also worked silver, but often with gold etching and chasing. They used many carnelian stones and gold and cherry amber from the Aral Sea.

The older pieces are made

FRIGIDAIRE

THE DUTAR, a gourd instrument of the Hindu-Kush, and a rare coral necklace set with jet and cobalt crystal. The urn is used in a ritual at the entrance to a mosque and the "padlock" is 250 years old. If the wrong key is used to open the lock, its silver threads will be stripped.

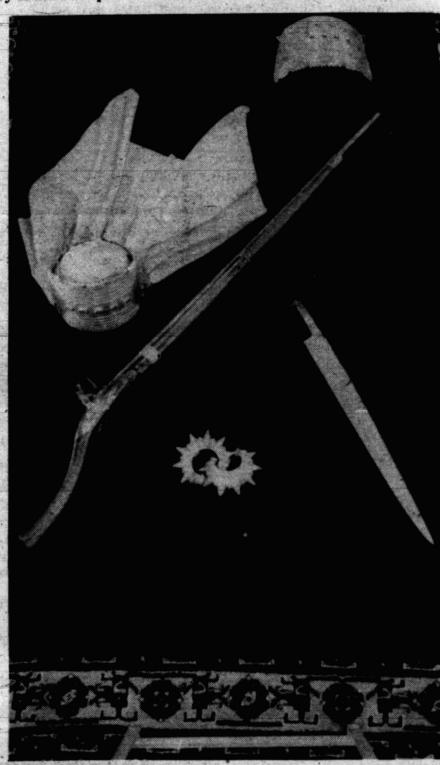

of pure silver bullion, but the newer jewelry was made from silver melted down from Russian Rubles.

There are several pieces in the collection 300-400 years old and even some 3,000-year old prayer beads from archeological digs.

But Conway sees, the impressive jewelry of old disappearing due to the diminishing population of the nomadic tribes and the purchase of the items by museums and collectors in the West. Also, the nomads of the northern plains have been trading with the Kuchi nomads of southern Afghanistan and Kuchi jewelry is cruder and less refined, set with pieces of Russian glass.

WESTINGHOUSE

KITCHENAID

AN 18TH CENTURY Khyber rifle (a flintlock originally captured from the British) is a common sight on the plains of northern Afghanistan. The sword, of pure silver, is a ceremonial object from the Durrani-Pushtoon tribe. The headdress is from the Russian Steppes, probably made in the 1700s and the silver cuffs (Kara) are for weddings.

Stillwater club plans regatta

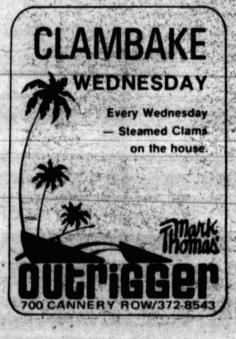

Saturday, May 29 the Stillwater Yacht Club will open the sailing season on Carmel Bay with the first races of the Commodore's Regatta and the Stuart Haldorn Series being sailed concurrently.

About 25 visiting sailors from Northern and Southern California are expected to compete in their Mercury Class sloops over the weekend races. The keel boats are ideally suited to the rough open waters of Carmel Bay yet will slip through the kelp patches in light winds with ease because of their sloping keels.

The race committee will fire the first warning gun at 2 p.m. Saturday evening the club will host competing skippers and crews to a beach barbeque at Stillwater

The second and third races will be sailed Sunday at 11 and 2:30 p.m. respectively with between race festivities highlighted by the christening of the new club launch, by Mrs. Salvatore Enea. An awards presentation will follow the third race

Later that evening competitors, and yachtsmen will converge at the Beach Club for the Commodore Thomas Catesby Victory Stomp, a costume ball in commemoration of the 24 hour conquest and occupation of Monterey by the American commander on October 20, 1842. The city was quickly restored to Mexico with apologies after Commodore Jones learned that Mexico and the United States were not at war as previously supposed. No harm was done, no one hurt, so shortly thereafter the Mexican governor hosted Commodore Jones to a three-day fiesta in Los Angeles.

Russian Kazakistan dowry necklace, c. 1740: worn by the Kazakistan tribe of the Southern Russian Steppes, the necklace was presented to the bride of a tribal chieftain as part of an islamic wedding covenant. This museum-quality piece has rare salmon colored coral from the Aral Sea, prized by the Kazaks for its healing and spiritual properties.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 28-30

The wealth, culture and religion of extinct and near-extinct nomadic tribes who roamed the Russian Steppes and the vast plateau of northern Afghanistan are captured and preserved in more than 200 superb necklaces.

For several centuries before the 1800's, fierce tribes of nomads ranged across the enormous expanses, grazing their sheep and occasionally raiding the great bazaars of Tashkent and Samarkhand. They were the Kazak and Turkoman tribes.

The women displayed the bulk of a family's wealth in their beautifully crafted silver jewelry that often incorporated religious and fertility symbols. Clay from the Holy Land encased in silver, fragments of tile chipped from a mosque, a scrap of silk from the robe of a priest, a prayer written on rice paper or etched into carnelian formed unique pendants, even as beads of rare salmon-pink coral and cherry amber from the Aral Sea were interspersed with pure silver beads on the necklaces.

Some of the pieces in the collection were actually worn by high priests in the Islamic religion; others belonged to tribal chieftains or were given to their daughters as betrothal gifts. Major pieces are rare dowry necklaces that incorporate the finest and most exacting silverwork, known as granulation, and first mastered by the Kazak tribe.

Green carnelian, honey-colored and red cherry amber, black prayer beads, gold-washed silver beds, lapis lazuli and coral enhance the finely-worked or intriguingly rough silver beadwork. Most of the jewelry is between 150 and 250 years old. Even as the craftsmen who wrought this timeless silverwork have vanished, so is the jewelry becoming increasingly rare.

For those who understand the thrill of holding history in their hands or bringing new life to a precious antique by wearing it, the Peterson Conway collection affords an opportunity to make part of the romantic

AN APPRECIATIVE FAMILY WHO WILL LOVE ME FOR WHAT I AM....A BEAUTIFUL HOME

I was the architectural creation of Dennis Hodgin and first broke ground in November 1974. The family that brought me here promised to love and live with me forever, but now they have to relocate for business reasons.

I'm full of open spaces and lots of windows. Most of my rooms look through the pines, across Monterey town, the Bay and the mountains beyond. I get lots of sun in Alta Mesa and people tell me it's the best weather on the peninsula.

I'm multi-level, nearly 4,000 square feet of warmth and interesting features. In addition to my four (or five) bedrooms, four full baths, I have a billiard room, workshop, two car garage, wine cellar and laundry room. And my gourmet kitchen has been the scene of numerous feats of culinary art.

To see me is to know me and to know me is to love me. You can acquire me for a modest $165,000. You can get acquainted with me by calling 649-6373.

Sincerely,

CASA DE LUCA
